Old Dominion University 1996

Every yearbook staff faces the difficult task of choosing a theme which sums up the entire year. As many staffs have found, no single phrase or idea can completely describe the atmosphere of a university campus.

Therefore, rather than representing a single theme for a campus which has such a wide variety of social, cultural, political and scholastical ideas, The Laureate staff chose a non-representational method which does not revolve around a central idea or year-long theme.

Though we have no explicit theme for this year's book, we hope each individual will make of this book what he will. This book is yours.

Student Life

Every year, around mid-August, thousands of students descend upon Hampton Boulevard and the surrounding areas, anxiously awaiting the start of the new school year. The dorms soon become packed as everyone tries to cram all of their stuff into a very small area, and the hope is that, when you meet your new roommate, he or she will be very understanding. For those planning to live off campus, finding a roommate you can live with in a decent apartment at an affordable price is the pressing issue. Campus is buzzing with people becoming acquainted with the college experience, excited to be on the brink of adult life, and hoping the end will come soon, nervous but ready to join the real world.

For some, college is a time of studying, partying, and sleeping. For others, balancing a full course load with a part time job can become stressful for even the most easygoing student. But most of all, college is a time for people to explore different interests and to make decisions about the future. It is the bridge between freedom from responsibility and the pressures of a working adult. It is the last hurrah before we move on to families and careers, so most students try to make their college years the best ones of their lives.

Although classes and studying are certainly important in college, it is the things we do outside of the classroom that we will remember for the rest of our lives. At ODU, student life means a culmination of changes, issues, and events which are an integral part of the university atmosphere. If students take anything away from their lives here at ODU besides their academic pursuits, it will be the activities and places and difficulties outside of the classroom, the lessons they've learned about life through their college experience.

Mainstreet was an annual event sponsored by the Student Activities Office. It was an opportunity for campus organizations to set up tables on Webb lawn and advertise their existence and their activities. Many freshman and transfer students found Mainstreet a convenient way to explore the organizations on campus.

Midnite Madness, the highly anticipated beginning of basketball season, was held on October 14, 1995. Before the teams were introduced at midnight, fans were able to enjoy an array of activities ranging from playing games to listening to the band. This event is held annually at colleges and universities across the nation.

Every year in November, the Shriners sponsor the Oyster Bowl at Forman Field. Other than the event being a chance for Virginia Military Institute's football team to dominate the grid iron, it is also an annual partying event for students.

I find it hard to believe you don't know the beauty that you are
but if you don't let me be your eyes
a hand to your darkness
so you won't be afraid
i'll be your mirror reflect what you are in case you don't know

The Year in Review

President Bill Clinton entered the third year of his term as no president has done for 40 years--with a Republican Congress. As he began this new year, he resolved to "put aside partisan differences."

Although cautious in dealing with the new Congress, Clinton has raised his profile and taken a firm stand on issues. He said he would try to work with the Republicans on their agenda, but would "no doubt" veto some of their proposals. On April 14, 1995,

Clinton filed the necessary documents with the Federal Election Commission and made formal his candidacy for re-election.

On October 3, 1995, the long-running, real-life soap opera played its final episode. In "the trial of the century," O.J.

Simpson was acquitted in the June 12, 1994, stabbing murder of his former wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman. Americans followed the trial for more than a year, listening to testimony, digesting the evidence and speculating on whether the former football superstar and film actor was guilty. The jury reached its verdict in less than four hours deliberation, after listening to 133 days of testimony and considering more than 800 pieces of evidence.

"Why do you want to be president?" asked the TV host. "Every country needs a president," replied Republican Senator Bob Dole. In April 1995 the Kansas Senator became the sixth Republican to formally declare his candidacy for a move into the White House in 1996. This is the third presidential attempt for Dole, who unsuccessfully ran in Republican primaries in 1980 and 1988.

In September, 1995, Colin Powell embarked on a cross-country book tour to promote his autobiography, "My American Journey." As he did this, he also promoted the notion that his next journey might be along the campaign trail, seeking the presidency of the United States in 1996. Powell, 58 years old, is the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the first African-American person to hold that position. He rose to fame through his leadership in the Persian Gulf War.

The Million Man March in Washington, D.C. on October 16, 1995, was tremendous.

Close to a million African-American men converged on the nation's capital in response to the call from Louis Farrakhan, the Nation of Islam's leader, to rally for unity and brotherhood. It was the fourth-largest demonstration in Washington's history, and the largest predominately African-American gathering. The rally's climax was Farrakhan's speech in which he led the men in a pledge to "never raise my hand with a knife or gun to beat, cut or shoot...any human being."

"The sight you see before you...was impossible, was unthinkable, just three years ago," Israel's Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told those present at the East Room of the White House. The "sight" was the September 28, 1995, signing of an accord between Israel and the PLO that would end Israel's military occupation of West Bank cities and lay the foundation for a Palestinian state. The agreement outlines the process for gradual withdrawal of Israeli troops and transfer of governing authority for Palestinian self-rule in 30 percent of the West Bank.

It was a match between two players vying for the top position in women's tennis. On September 9, 1995, Germany's Steffi Graf emerged as #1 as she beat Monica Seles in New York to win her fourth U.S. Open title. For Graf, it was the third consecutive Grand Slam title, coming after victories at Wimbledon and at the French Open. In spite of her defeat on the tennis court, Monica Seles feels like a victor of sorts. This loss was the first in a dozen matches that marked her inspired return to the sport after a two-year absence. Seles had been stabbed in the back by a deranged fan at a match in Hamburg, Germany.

The Cleveland Indians and the Atlanta Braves squared off in the first World Series in two years. This was, perhaps, the first between teams with politically incorrect nicknames. The Braves won the series in six games, after taking a two-games-to-none lead in their home park. They won the series on their return to Atlanta with a 1-0 victory marked by David Justice's home run and the one-hit pitching of Tom Glavine, who was named Series MVP.

The leader of the Grateful Dead was gone. Jerry Garcia, co-founder of rock music's the Grateful Dead, Died of a heart attack while in a drug rehabilitation center in suburban San Francisco. The guitarist, composer and singer passed away on August 9, 1995, just eight days after his 53rd birthday. Deadheads, as the group's followers were known, quickly gathered to note the passing of their fallen leader. Crowds formed in public areas in San Francisco, Garcia's hometown, and in other cities to share their loss. A single red rose was tied to a tree in front of the San Francisco address where the Dead began in 1964.

On April 19, 1995, a car bomb exploded in Oklahoma City, destroying the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building and killing scores of men, women and young children. The force of the blast tore off the building's facade and sent it flying 50 feet across the street, where it slammed into another building and came to rest in a parking lot. Shortly after the explosion, Timothy McVeigh, a Gulf War veteran was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon. Two days later, he was recognized as one of the bombing suspects and was charged. McVeigh's trial is pending.

For a few days, a religious man dominated the headlines. And for a change, it gave Americans something good to talk about. The newsmaker was Pope John Paul II, and the occasion was his visit to the United States in early October 1995. The 75-year-old pontiff began his five-day visit by addressing the United Nations General Assembly in conjunction with the organization's 50th anniversary.

Despite continued NATO air strikes and U.N. peace efforts, the conflict in the former Yugoslavia rages on, with no letup in sight. 1995 began with a four month ceasefire mediated by former United States President Jimmy Carter, but the truce did not put an end to the fighting.

This year's hurricane season was very active. One of the most devastating storms was Hurricane Opal. On October 4, 1995, Opal came ashore on Florida's Gulf Coast. Hampton Roads prepared for the worst, but was spared the damage seen in Florida.

An Amtrak train derailed while crossing a trestle in a remote region of Arizona. The derailment was caused by the removal of a metal bar that held two sections of rail together. The culprit installed a wire, disabling a light that would have warned the train's crew about the break. The apparent knowledge of the warning system led to speculation that it might be the work of a railroad employee. Found at the scene was a letter that referred to the federal sieges at Waco, Texas, and Ruby Ridge, Idaho, and mentioned the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. It was signed "Sons of Gestapo."

People

People. What can we say? Obviously, people are an important topic when speaking of an educational institution.

Without a doubt, the most important part of any university is the people. It takes people to run it, people to attend it, people to clean it up, and just people to support it. Without people, a school would just be a bunch of buildings. A university requires minds for it to achieve its purpose.

At Old Dominion University, we have a widely varied group of people who make up both the student and the professional population on campus. This diversity helps make the ODU community more open to various interests and lifestyles.

Adults of all ages come from near and far to attend ODU. Some are just students. Some are moms and dads who want to farther their educations and go to school like their kids. Some work. Some don't. Some live on or near campus. Some commute. We have people of all different backgrounds from all over the world here at ODU.

This section contains the faces of some of the people who have successfully fulfilled the requirements for a degree at Old Dominion University this year.

Congratulations seniors!

The Academics

In putting together this book, the editors pondered the two uses of the word "academics." While it undoubtedly refers to the teaching, studying, and learning of the wide range of subjects offered at the university, academics can also mean the gifted scholars who provide us with the knowledge we are here to gain. With that in mind, we debated about what the academics section of a yearbook should really include.

Usually, the academics section consists of dozens of pictures of students sitting in desks in various classes. We decided that since most of those pictures end up looking pretty much the same and since the majority of students already know exactly what its like to sit through a class, we would just skip that set of pictures this time around.

Instead, we turned our attention to the other type of academics, the scholars and educators who shape our educational experience and the beginnings of our futures. After all, these are the people to whom we look for guidance and knowledge during our college careers. In that sense, this definition of "academics" becomes the more important usage when it comes to putting together a collection of college memories.

Therefore, we decided this year to dedicate the academics section to the faculty and staff, the true academics behind the university.

"The GLBSA. Many people ask what does GLBSA stand for. Some wait to hear the whole answer, while others tune out after Gay, Lesbian, ... The answer to this question is Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Students and Allies. The next question asked is, 'What is an ally?' Well, that is a part of our name and group that I feel is as important as the rest. These are people who support gay, lesbian, and bisexual people. Some show their support behind the scenes, while others are 'out' in the front. I feel that allies are important for gay, lesbian and bisexual people to have because they can help get things going when the door is being shut in our faces."

Sports

Like many other major universities, sports are an important part of life at Old Dominion. From the banging of field hockey sticks in early fall to the pounding of the courts during basketball season to the sounds of springtime baseball, our talented athletes receive enthusiastic support from students and faculty throughout the year.

Though some people feel that ODU does not have the same caliber of athletes as schools with more recognized teams, our athletic programs are becoming stronger all the time. People who know our teams know that they consist of talented athletes and able coaches. Bigger universities may have more of a track record, but we have just as much enthusiasm for its athletic teams as any other major university.

Unique to our situation, however, is the immense community support for the university's athletic teams. Being in one of the largest metropolitan areas without a major sports team, local sports fans turn their attention toward us.

And the support is well-deserved. ODU is home to a variety of fine athletic programs and hard-working athletes. ODU sports is all about talent, hard work and fun.

Community

Community plays an important role in the atmosphere at Old Dominion University. In many ways, the university and Norfolk are very much a part of each other. Located right next to busy Hampton Boulevard and hemmed in by neighborhoods and businesses, the school is in a give and take situation with the community.

Many students live, work, or volunteer in the areas surrounding campus while the university's neighbors provide the local support necessary for an urban university to thrive. The range of opportunities and experiences the Norfolk area has to offer is beneficial to students, but the activities and events in Hampton Roads also make it fun.

The large number of students who commute also show how the community and the university are connected. With people coming from all over to attend classes, students themselves bring variety to the campus.

The Norfolk community is part of what makes ODU so special. Unlike life at a university which is situated in a "college town" or a smaller community, students get the dual experience of college and city life when they come to Old Dominion.
